Knotted or tied ham in bladder

Knotted ham can be made of meat that otherwise would be much too greasy. Debone the ham and remove fat. Remove the top round, the round and the meat, the tendons and the fat above the fibulla. Rub in a mixture of 50g saltpeter and 125g sugar, put in a pot and press down the lid. Cover with brine of 18 degrees. After curing rinse with cold water for 10 to 15 minutes then cut into 500g pieces. Put each piece into a bladder of a calf and tie tightly. Scald in hot water and smoke until yellow. The ham can be cut either raw or after cooking. It can substitute salmon ham (Lachs-schinken) in its raw state.

*If you are also curious to find out which is the best ham of the world, and want everyone else to know, please forward our letter to your friends and colleagues, or display it on your website!
